

specific, and at the same time the most profuse eulogy upon the principles of good old Federalism, that has appeared, in an official shape, since the valedictory of the great and beloved Washington. From its alpha to its omega, it is a contravention of the principle, principle did I say? the factions, jacobinical, disorganizing, deceitful, demoralizing clamours, by the continued and artful utterance of which, the administration of the best government in the world was driven into a wayward course and almost lost sight of the interests, character and honour of the nation—True American.

MR. SHIRLEY.

It appears that a plot of a very insidious and extraordinary character has been discovered. "Self-created Societies" exist among us, organized, secret and active, endeavoring to excite party violence, and in this way to effect certain purposes highly detrimental to the many, for the benefit of themselves and their associates. One of their letters appeared in the Gazette of the 12th inst. It became public by a fortunate accident. One of these societies, it seems is established in Portland, and that it embraces a considerable extent of territory, for the President belongs to the county of York. How many other branches of the "Union Societies" there are, we know not. Zealous efforts, it appears, are making to "increase their number—to establish funds, to be held in common, and appropriated for such expenses as may be incurred, more especially to remunerate those whose duty it is to devote their time in collecting, writing and publishing such documents as will best promote the great objects in view." "We," say they, "must keep an eye to the separation of Maine from Massachusetts." "This subject will soon be spread before the people, and to accomplish an object so much for our interests and our honor, it is of the highest importance to establish these societies, and that each give his mite for their support." The above are extracts from the letter of these new illuminati. It explains many things which have appeared unaccountable. Every body seemed surprised that the question of separating Maine from Massachusetts which, last winter, was supposed to have died with the war, should again be agitated. No one could account for the journals which were made by certain characters into remote parts of Maine. Nobody could tell why we heard one man selected for this office, and another for that, in the new State, and the whole bustle seemed to be made by a few men and their dependants, whilst every body else appeared either opposed to the plan, or perfectly quiet respecting it. We now find that since last June, there has been a combination of men among us, in league with certain others in old Massachusetts, who are determined that the people of Maine shall not "manage their own affairs in their own way," but shall be guided and governed by the secret influence of these societies "unknown to the constitution." Societies of this description were pointedly denounced by the Father of his country, and they fled before his influence and the good sense of the people. Those who know the characters and designs of the movers of this machinery, perceive that it is a cunning attempt to inflame the feelings of party for their own promotion and aggrandizement. But they dare not avow the real object. Hence we have a flourish about "republican interests," "extending energies," "guarding against every attempt to sever the union of the states," &c. &c. It is well known that these men have long cherished this scheme of a new state, but knowing that there are many solid and perhaps insurmountable objections and that the people have again and again voted by large majorities against it; the attempt is now made to ingratiate it upon the irritation which grew out of the war, which had happily begun to abate; to excite and influence by secret measures, and by means of money upon which they say expressly, "depends the success of their efforts," to create an artificial popularity to a measure which the unbiased good sense of the people of Maine would in all probability oppose. It will be remembered that some years since a similar attempt was got up by some of the leaders in the Legislature at Boston, and that it was opposed by gentlemen of all parties from Maine. At that time an Hon. Senator from Kennebec, with a view to bring the question fairly before the people, offered a Resolution for that purpose. What did the friends of separation, from Maine in the Senate? To the astonishment of all present they kept the question off till the last day of the session, and then left their places so that a quorum could not be collected; they standing in sight the whole time! We always find the plan of separation originates from the same quarter: not from the people, but from certain leaders of the Legislature.

This was manifested last winter. At that time they found the most cogent arguments in the way, but peace happened to come during their adjournment, and they were obliged to suspend "their useful labors," and set their compass anew. The truth is there is no good reason to be given in favor of the measure at this time. The great argument formerly was that the Supreme Court could not do the business of Maine, but since the alterations in that establishment, the difficulty is entirely at an end. And when the increase of expense; the embarrassment and in many places ruin of the coasting trade; so extensive and valuable, with many other objections, are considered; it is not apprehended that the people of Maine can be induced, even by these same "Union Societies," to lend their aid to separate the only large state in the Eastern section of the union. It is to be expected that a few men who now stand committed, will persist, but such an important measure cannot be sanctioned so long as the interests and feelings of the people are against it, and whilst a majority is too independent to be dictated to by any authority short of their own honest conviction. It is not my intention to state the arguments so often repeated upon this subject, but on reading the letter of the "Union Society," which has happily been laid before the public, it seemed desirable to examine for a moment, that the attention of the people of Maine might be directed to an intrigue of a character so unprecedented in this part of the country.

AN OBSERVER.

Union Societies—again.

In our last we inserted several pieces in favor of a separation of Maine from old Massachusetts, and the institution of Union Societies to further this grand design—and assigned as one, among other reasons for the measure, that it would prove beneficial to above one hundred persons in this District—and what is better than all the rest, the advantages would be principally confined to that very worthy class of citizens, who, tired of the dull pursuits of civil life, and anxious to display their love for the people by taking upon themselves the execution of all such offices as shall be created by the separation, would serve the people for the sake of—the honor and emoluments. For this labor of love the Union Society in this town, so far from passing a vote of thanks, or discovering any gratitude for the services we are rendering them, accuse us of "pawing and mangling" the Doctor's darling offspring in such a manner "as to detract much from its otherwise creditable appearance." Now we take this opportunity of assuring the Doctor, and through him the Honorable members of the Union Society, that we had no hand in pawing or mangling either him or his favorite Circular—and further, that as this is a free country, we have as good a right to further the designs of the Society as he has. We are so far from being disposed to return railing for railing, however, that we are willing the Doctor should be paid for editing the Argus, and the Society for any money which it may have advanced for the purchase of new types. To this end we give place to the Subscription Paper which accompanied the Circular, and call upon all true-blue Democ-Rats to use their utmost diligence in raising the money—for these laborers must be worthy of their hire.

The following is the Subscription Paper.

"The subscribers agree to pay the sums set against their respective names, to the Hon. James Prince, of Boston, or to the Hon. Woodbury Storor, of Portland, for the purpose of establishing a fund for disseminating political information, one half on demand, and the other half on or before the last day of January, A. D. 1816.

Subscribers Names.	Residence.	Amount.
	Pownal,	$1 00

We congratulate the friends of "our interests and our honor," upon the very liberal support which our cause is likely to receive in the town of Pownal. We hope Mr. Haskell has not neglected to forward to the Treasurer one half the amount of subscription—and the other half he can keep until the last of January. After Mr. Storor gets the first installment, and the second is paid to the "Honourable James Prince," they will then have half a dollar a piece!

The Circular—once more.

I saw a piece in the Argus last week entitled the Circular. I thought it must have been the production of some Grub Street writer; but an unwillingly convinced that it was a professional man—a man of liberal education—a gentleman. What? a gentleman consent to use the weapons of the vulgar? I shall joy if I am mistaken in the man, for I did hope your political medicines were pure—and that your political practice was as upright as your professional. We know not who was meant by your "knight of the green bag" and your "other one," but this we know that they will not regard your quill driving, unless it is more to the purpose; nor your "rod in pickle," for it is for the fool's back. When a theological or political writer descends to personal abuse, their writings are disregarded—no worthy end was ever gained by it. What have the foibles of certain characters in this town to do with the separation of Maine?

Discuss the question of separation fairly and you will be an honourable disputant; but for heaven's sake—the Argus—and your own—do leave alone people in the dark—you reduce the credit of that paper which is now full low. Cease throwing mud and give us good sense.

The Female Charitable Society, Gratefully acknowledge the liberal and affluence public, for the reasonable and liberal aid afforded them on Thursday evening, by a contribution of $104 22—and respectfully present their thanks to the Musicians for that elegant portion of entertainment which their performance supplied.

Portland, Dec. 16.

It appears that the number of applicants for offices increases as our country advances in years. Whatever disadvantages have occurred in other countries, by giving rise to factions, by creating time-serving politicians, by causing the creation of offices for the very purpose of providing for expectants, and by pensions, may be expected in this nation within a thousand years.

Of $7,993 stands of arms distributed by Virginia, to her militia during the war, only 28,630 have been received.

President Madison, in his Message, displays a laudable desire to improve the roads, and we trust Congress will promptly second him in this disposition to mend his ways. When we recollect what a rough ride and jolting and blistering race he suffered "up the scraggy mountain and down the heather glen" at the terrific appearance of the British Red-coats at Bladensburg, men of generous feelings will readily agree that smooth turnpikes ought to be constructed in every direction from Washington to facilitate the escape of our public functionaries from the capital; and, especially, if they manifest a disposition to retreat from power, all the people will exclaim, Clear the Road! Clear the Road!

In Westbrook, by the Rev. C. Bradley, Mr. Nathaniel Warren, to Miss Ann Small.

DIED.

In Brunswick, Mr. Adam Woodside—a child of Mr. Josiah Gould.

In Hallowell, Nathaniel Cheever, jun. eldest son of the Editor of the American Advocate, aged 10. While amusing himself in skating on the river, he incautiously approached too near an open place, and the ice broke under him—his companion a lad of eight or nine years old, gave an immediate alarm, but alas! too late to preserve him from a watery grave!

Searborough, Nov. 12, 1815—Mrs. LEXIA LANCASTER, wife of the Rev. Thomas Lancaster, in the seventieth year of her age, slept in Jesus. She was a devoted Christian and Christiana, being a devotedly united to the Government of God. Her heart was in Heaven while she inhabited this earthly tabernacle—Her delight was in the law, gospel and worship of God. Patience had its perfect work in her Soul—she bore with a smile rather than groan the most distressing sickness. We leave her, in fruit of joy unspeakable and full of glory.

In this town, Mrs. Lucy, consort of Capt. Edward Barneville, aged 29.—On the 10th instant, Mrs. Jane McCulloch, aged 46.

The Caron, Capt. Fatershall, has lately conveyed from Bermuda to Trinidad, fifty North American Indians, who joined, during the late war, Admiral Cochrane's squadron; these men, it appears, selected Trinidad for their future residence, where, in pursuance of the promise originally held out to them they will receive grants of land, and be taught the cultivation and manufacture of the sugar cane.
